2. Presentation: UNM Center for Social Policy – Southeastern NM Oil and Gas Workforce Study – Gabriel Sanchez
  - a. Work force needs, access, training, and priorities that can be considered for helping diversify industries and support transitioning workers in O&G
  - b. They shared their research on the Southeastern quadrant of the state of New Mexico, specifically regarding a clean energy transition and its effect on the workforce. The research aimed to discover what actions could be taken to prepare for jobs and opportunities for the workforce in the region. The Permian Basin, located in the Southeastern region, is vital to New Mexico's transition to a renewable energy economy. The population in the area is predominantly Hispanic and Latino, and many oil workers and those employed in associated industries are immigrants.
3. Presentation – Somos Un Pueblo Unido – Marcela Diaz
